

Photos: Inside a Multi-Million Dollar New York Home

Posted by Alicia Cox Friday, September 17, 2010 8:00 AM

All photos by Alex Beck, Inadequate Animal

Did you watch last night's episode of Selling New York? CORE agent (and native Canadian) Maggie Kent joined us for our weekly live blog chat and answered questions on everything from how she got her real estate start to whether it's better to rent or buy right now. The homes showcased on SNY each week are killer, aren't they? Wouldn't you like to get a closer look?

Well, folks, Vanessa and I were lucky enough to take a trip to New York last month to see inside more pricey homes with priceless views, all being sold by the CORE agency. The below photos are from 173 Perry Street, a property currently for sale by CORE. The unit is in one of two high profile buildings across the street from one another built by renowned architect Richard Meier. We had to get special permission to shoot inside this home as the building has tight security to protect its celebrity dwellers and owners such as Martha Stewart, Calvin Klein and actor/singer/all-around-eccentric Vincent Gallo, to unabashedly name-drop a few. Enjoy!

Behind the retractable wall is a bedroom and a bathroom with a spectacular view...

See? Luxuriate in your bath while overlooking the river.

Or, take in the view from the balcony.

Neutral decor doesn't distract from the raw beauty of the space.

Love the over-sized lamp.

And this one, too.

Curved walls and ceilings are just some of the details.

What do you think? Could you live in a multi-million dollar home like this?