A swath of new renderings of SCDA Architects' condo tower was released this week, more than three years after the project was first announced in 2014. As Curbed NY learned, the new renderings of the building, located, at 515 West 29th Street, show a glass fin facade and the interiors of the 15 planned apartments, including five penthouses. Capital Partners is developing the tower, dubbed Five One Five, which will contain two- and three-bedroom units ranging from $4.3 million to $8.5 million. CORE is handling sales and marketing.

The boutique development will feature roughly 36,000 square feet of condominium space and over 4,000 square feet of balcony space. First announced in 2014, the project will feature retail on the cellar and ground floors. Construction will wrap up this summer.

SCDA Architects' principal architect, Soo K. Chan, designed a nearby condo tower, Soori High Line, at 522 West 29th Street. The ultra-luxe building features units that come with private pools. As 6sqft covered last November, a penthouse triplex, with 20-foot ceilings, a private heated pool and multiple terraces, hit the market for $22.5 million.
