5 Queens starter apartments for $400K or less

From Jackson Heights to Long Island City, here are a few studios and one-bedrooms you can nab in Queens right now

Welcome to a semi-regular feature, Price Points, in which we pick a relatively low asking price and a type of apartment, then scour StreetEasy to find the best available options around the city. Today's task: Queens studios and one-bedrooms asking under $400,000.

Core.

↑This colorful Jackson Heights co-op is asking a mere $398,500. The one-bedroom abode is a floor-through unit that encompasses 800 square feet and boasts a renovated eat-in kitchen, a walk-in closet, and oversized windows that give view to the building's private courtyard. Monthly maintenance is $408. [Floorplan]
