

AllCityApts

June 27, 2012

Walker Tower, 25 percent sold, gets a warm welcome from residential brokers

From left: Ryan Serhant of Nestseekers and Oren Alexander of Prudential Douglas Elliman, a photo of the penthouse's living room and the north view from the penthouse Real estate power players turned out last night for the launch of Chelsea's newest condo development. Indeed, the opening of sales at Walker Tower — the long-awaited residential conversion by JDS Development of an Art Deco building designed in 1929 by Ralph Walker — drew much attention from the residential real estate community. Town Residential's Wendy Maitland and Reid Price, NestSeekers' Ryan Serhant, Prudential Douglas Elliman's Oren Alexander, Fredrik Eklund and John Gomes, and the Corcoran Group's Robby Browne stopped by to take a peek at the building's model unit on the tenth floor. The tower, at 212 West 18th Street, will not be completed until next year