Seven apartments with the most over-the-top outdoor spaces in the US

The last thing you probably want to do in the summer — no matter just how hot and humid it may be — is sit inside.

But when you're living in an urban setting or a big city, finding adequate space to enjoy the outdoors in privacy can prove to be rather difficult.

It's no surprise that potential homeowners looking to buy in the summer months prioritize adequate outdoor space — and for some willing to shell out the big bucks, the outdoor spaces can be even more extravagant and breathtaking than the indoor space itself.

Check out the seven U.S. apartments with the most over-the-top outdoor spaces:

38 Prince Street
New York, New York

The spectacular $25 million, five-floor traditional townhome at The Residences at Prince has one of the most serene private oasis' in Manhattan. This 7-bedroom, 7.5-bathroom home is located in the heart of Downtown Manhattan's Nolita district, and when the homeowner exits their family dining and parlor area through the elaborate Schuco French folding doors, they are met with a 1,115-square-foot bi-level backyard space. Designed by landscape architect PFI, the backyard is accented with a variety of unique trees, shrubs and vines and perfect for any urbanite looking for peace of mind.

From the unassuming streets of SoHo in Manhattan to beachside dreamscapes in Miami, these apartments are serving serious views and room for play that might just make you never want to go back inside — until the snow comes, that is!

So whether you're dreaming of all-day barbecues, nighttime cocktail parties or just good old fashioned sunbathing, there's no denying that you a private outdoor oasis is the one luxury that might just be worth splurging for.
