

April 23, 2013

House of the Day: Nate Berkus Puts NYC Apartment On the Market for $699,000

This apartment in Manhattan's Greenwich Village is just a one-bedroom, one-bath. But where it lacks in space, it makes up in style. Designed and renovated by Oprah darling Nate Berkus, the West Village place was featured in O Magazine and was recently listed for sale at $699,000.

Getty Images

According to property records, Berkus bought the home in 2006 for $550,000, and he owns another home in New York -- a larger, 3,000-square-foot property -- that he picked up in 2011. The designer recently became engaged to his longtime boyfriend, Jeremiah Brent. The two bought a house in late 2012 in Hollywood Hills, Calif., and may be calling the Golden State home for a while.

The western-facing apartment in NYC has "views of one of the most charming corners of the Village." Berkus' updates to the home include a renovated kitchen with new appliances and a bathroom with Carrera marble floors, white subway tile and vintage hardware. The listing is held by Emily Beare of CORE. See more photos of Berkus' apartment below.

See the listing for more details.

