

ELLE DECOR

November 23, 2015

Nate Berkus' Sky-High Manhattan Penthouse Could Be Yours

The designer and his husband have just listed their dreamy family home for $10.5 million.

Nate Berkus has grown into a design world powerhouse, becoming a highly sought after talent praised in the pages of ELLE DECOR. One look into any of the homes he's created and the reason why is clear.

His own Manhattan penthouse, located inside an elegant pre-war building on the glamorous Fifth Avenue, is no exception. Renovated by Berkus, the interiors are a mix of subtle sophistication and daring contemporary design. But it seems he's ready to part with the three-bedroom home.

Just listed for $10.5 million, the duplex home was designed for entertaining on the main floor and family living on the floor below, complete with a play area and nursery for Berkus's baby daughter, Poppy.

What has our hearts really racing, though, is the design star's immaculate closet. So. Much. Space.

Check out Berkus's entire home below.