

Forbes

June 9, 2017

After a Price Cut, Kelsey Grammer Sells His New York Condominium

Kelsey Grammer star of the NBC sitcoms 'Cheers' and 'Frasier.' (Photo by Jordan Strauss/Invision/AP)

Actor Kelsey Grammer has agreed to sell his Manhattan condo. The apartment, in the Chelsea district, was listed at $8.95 million. A sales price could not be determined but Grammer lowered the price from $9.75 million just two months ago.

The three bedroom home sits inside a tower designed by Pritzker Prize-winner Jean Nouvel, according to listing agents Emily Beare and Daniel Amell of CORE. The home measures about 3,076-square-foot with views of the Hudson River and New York skyline, the listings says.

Grammer, 51, is best known for his two-decade-long portrayal of psychiatrist Dr. Frasier Crane on the NBC sitcoms Cheers and Frasier. He has won five Primetime Emmy Awards, three Golden Globe Awards, and one Tony Award. He also worked as a television producer, director, writer, and as a voice actor on The Simpsons as Sideshow Bob where he received his fifth Primetime Emmy.