

GOTHAM

September 28, 2016

5 NYC Apartments That Redefine 'Bachelor Pad'

Bachelor pads don't necessarily mean the man caves you rented straight out of college. Don't believe us? These tastefully-designed homes are among the most in-demand properties in Manhattan and make an idyllic address for the single man, whether he's a sophisticated, professional urban dweller or one who loves to entertain friends. Take a look:

87 Leonard, Maisonette B

This TriBeCa loft, designed by the hip firm GRADE, combines homey touches with the neighborhood's industrial vibes. The downtown bachelor will find expansive entertaining spaces flanked by Corinthian columns, handsome, original wood beams indoors, and an equally impressive outdoor space. Perhaps the winning touch is the room filled with video game machines and a foosball table.