

HUFFPOST HOME

February 1, 2016

The J. Crew CEO's Apartment Looks Exactly Like You Think It Does

All you need is a cool $25 million.

Hold on to your henleys, people. Curbed reports J. Crew CEO Mickey Drexler has re-listed his massive New York City pad -- and when we get a look into the home of a J. Crew exec, we take it.

At $25 million, Drexler's home is listed for $10 million below the asking price when it was listed for sale back in 2015 (what a bargain!). The home has 6,226 square feet - a mansion by Manhattan standards- and features an open floor plan. The five-bedroom, seven-and-a-half-bathroom home has three walk-in closets and is located in the heart of NYC's coveted Tribeca neighborhood.

With its floor-to-ceiling windows and mid-century vibe, the apartment is downright stunning.

A spokeswoman for the listing real estate brokerage firm, Core, declined to comment on the sale, but you can get more information on the property at corenyc.com.

