Tom and Gisele's giant dog squad will ruff it downtown

When supermodel Gisele Bündchen and Patriots quarterback Tom Brady move into their new $20 million digs at the Robert A.M. Stern-designed 70 Vestry, they'll be towing along two chic children and three A-list pooches.

Fortunately the brood — including kids Vivian Lake (3) and Benjamin (6), plus Lua (their pitbull mix), Scooby (their beagle) and Fluffy (their recently rescued puppy) — will have 5,000 square feet and five bedrooms to roam in the posh Tribeca pad.

If the moving stress is too much for the furballs, they can check into the building's Dog City pet spa, whose services include day care, grooming and boarding.

The family's former home — a sprawling apartment in One Madison that they bought for $14 million in 2013 — is now on the market (through Core's Jim St. André and Stephanie McDonough) for $17.25 million.

That 3,310-square-foot unit has four bedrooms and three-and-a-half bathrooms — no word on the number of doggie doors.
