

REFINERY29

March 30, 2015

10 NYC Pads Monumental Enough For The Obamas

74 Washington Place, listed by Emily and David Beare, is featured in a round-up of homes the Obamas should consider looking at in NYC.

If news of New York's biggest power couple decamping to L.A. threw you for a loop, fret not: An even bigger duo may be moving in. BuzzFeed reports that the Obamas are "seriously considering moving to New York," when the president's second term ends in January 2017. The possible construction of the Obama Library at Columbia University (Barack's alma mater) seems to be part of the appeal.

Although Barack, Michelle, Sasha, and Malia have deep roots in Chicago, the president and first lady are by no means strangers to New York. Obama has hosted dinner parties at Daniel Boulud's chic namesake restaurant, and he spent his college days in Morningside Heights. Most recently, FLOTUS was spotted visiting NYU and Barnard with Malia and the first dog, Bo.

To help the first family expedite their grueling real estate hunt, we've dug up 10 amazing NYC homes that easily rival 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. From indoor gyms and Central Park views to some seriously stunning (and historic!) Brooklyn sites, we see no problem convincing the Obamas that New York is where they belong.

Farewell, Jay Z. We're welcoming another boss to the empire state of mind.

Neighborhood: Brooklyn Heights

Address: 89 Joralemon Street

Price: $6.25 million

Alexander Lyman Holley, a renowned 19th century Brooklyn steel engineer, used to live here. Time for a celebrity update, Joralemon Street.

Neighborhood: Greenwich Village

Address: 47 West 9th Street

Price: $26 million

A stunning townhouse with a 1,000-bottle wine cellar to take the edge off eight years in the Oval Office.

Neighborhood: Central Park South

Address: 150 Central Park South

Price: $6.3 million

This apartment's sweeping views beat looking out the White House lawn. Central Perk, for real.

Neighborhood: Tribeca

Address: 11 Beach Street

Price: $12 million

Tribeca: So Michelle and David Bowie can hang out, every single day.

Neighborhood: Upper East Side

Address: 160 East 83rd Street

Price: $29.5 million

The UES can be boring, but the glass-enclosed private gym in this apartment might be a slam dunk for Obama.

Neighborhood: Soho

Address: 158 Mercer Street

Price: $8.95 million

Michelle may have to swap Tracy Reese and Thakoon for Marc Jacobs and Marni on this supremely trendy block.

Neighborhood: Brooklyn Heights

Address: 360 Furman Street

Price: $5.995 million

The sign on the wall says it all: The Obamas should make this stylish BK Heights haunt home.

Neighborhood: Tribeca

Address: 415 Greenwich Street

Price: $6.495 million

Bo. Sasha. Malia. Michelle. Barack. There's room for all five on that couch.

Neighborhood: Greenwich Village

Address: 74 Washington Place

Price: $25 million

Bo is bound to love bounding through these halls. We're sure of it.

Neighborhood: Crown Heights

Address: 1286 President Street

Price: $3.5 million

President Street. Need we say more?